Last Month Speaker

Christopher Gaze with Esio Marzotto

We were privileged at our August 10 meeting to have Christopher Gaze, founder of Vancouver's Bard on the Beach Festival, describe to us the past 20 years of operation. He began with a video showing their two theatre tents in Vanier Park, a beautiful setting of beach, ocean and mountains, with several members of the cast in costume, including our guest outfitted in ladies clothing.

In 1989 the Festival's annual operating budget was $35 thousand compared with the current year budget of $3.5 million and attendance was 6,000 versus 87,000. The first and a key change made in year two was to open the back of the main tent so the audience could enjoy the beautiful view beyond the stage.

The Festival has become phenomenally successful commonly with 98% to 100% of capacity sold out for 225 performances over four and one half months. It is a remarkable achievement and it is a dream come true for people in the arts. He credits much of the success to Vancouver's large number of excellent actors.

The business of managing an acting company is complex. As artistic director, he selects the directors and chooses the actors, along with the designers of the sets and costumes. Crises occur as in every business. Recently the lead actor in Richard II fell seriously ill and Gaze had to step in to replace him in the role while retaining the task of juggling the other plays.

Bard on the Beach is all about Shakespeare, the complete master of language to express feelings, ideas and philosophies. Many of the Bard's members belong to the Churchill Society that recognizes another great orator who could persuade and move people to action. Christopher Gaze believes that Churchill learned his great oratorical skills from his knowledge of Shakespeare.

400 years later, Shakespeare's plays continue to thrill people as they have throughout the ages. There is a sense of the eternal about them.

Gaze treated us by reciting a poem Shakespeare wrote to immortalize his son who died at a young age when he was away performing in London. As an additional special treat, Christopher thrilled us with Henry V's speech to his generals at the Battle of Agincourt when they were facing certain defeat by the French. Our members applauded loudly.

Gaze answered questions for twenty minutes to the delight of our members and guests.

President's Report

Esio Marzotto

The backbone of any organization is its members. As my year as President comes to a close, I would like to salute you, our members. You attend our meetings regularly and provide our speakers with an audience deserving of their efforts to inform, entertain and otherwise stimulate us with their views.

I am proud of our club's accomplishments and grateful for the participation of so many members. I am indebted to the dedicated team that we know as the Management Committee. I hope that your participation on the Committee has been as rewarding for all of you as it has for me. I have learned from you and very much enjoyed being in your company.

The future management of our club is in competent hands. A number of Committee chairs have agreed to continue in their roles thereby providing valuable continuity with several new members bringing the fresh new ideas needed in an active club. To President-Elect David Osoba and his new team I wish every success in the coming year.

Special Events

Update on Navy Frigate HMCS Calgary Day Sail: We recently received a "Thank You" note from the Military Family Resource Centre in Esquimalt acknowledging the generous contribution of $1,870 from our members who attended the event.

Bard on the Beach: On August 18 sixty members and guests ventured out on a glorious, warm sunny evening to enjoy the slightly risqué comedy "All's Well That Ends Well" We managed to get in the front of the line and reserve seats somewhat close to one another.

Golf Group: Members enjoyed golf and social time at Northlands on June 29 (16 golfers) and at Squamish on July 27 (20 golfers). Pictures are posted on our website. A third golf outing is scheduled at Squamish for September 14, starting at 1:26 pm. The plan is to be "golf ready" at our meeting in the morning and to leave directly from Capilano for Squamish, grabbing a bite of lunch there.
